Part 2

Read the text and do the task:

blind — слепой save — спасать

Dogs

You know that a dog is a man's best friend. The dog is also man's oldest friend.

More than ten thousand years ago, dogs didn't live with people. They were wild.

Now dogs live with people and do many good things for them. Dogs can be "eyes" for blind people. There was a dog, Bruno, who saved 40 people in the mountains. Dogs help geologists to find metals. They help police officers to catch criminals.

If you have a dog, you know how clever dogs are. You can teach your dog to do many tricks: to bring things to you, to carry your bag when you do shopping, to help you with your school-bag when you come home from school.

Dogs usually like to swim and you can teach your dog to swim. But you must remember that some dogs are afraid of water.

Where do you leave your dog, when you go on holiday? Leave him in good hands: with a neighbour or a family friend. Take your dog to these people before you go away. Sit down and talk to them. Show your dog that they are your friends and he will like them.

Take care of your dog; never let him run wild in the street. If you are good to your dog, he will be your real friend.

Read the text again and put the events in the correct order:

6. Dogs help police officers. 3
7. More than ten thousand years ago dogs didn't live with people. 1
8. Never let your dog run wild in the street. 5
9. When you go on holiday, you can leave your dog with a family friend. 4

Task 1 Прочитайте текст и предложения к нему. Напишите в таблице выбранные буквы A (если True) или B (если False).

Look at the sentences below about the people who have visited Antarctica. Read the text and decide if each sentence is true or false according to the text. If it is true, choose A on your Answer Sheet. If it is false, choose B on your Answer Sheet.

ANTARCTICA by Hannah Lane

Journalist Sara Wheeler writes about her meeting with the artist Philip Hughes and the discussion they had about their experiences in Antarctica.

Antarctica has had a powerful effect on both explorers and scientists. In 1994 I discovered why, when I spent seven months there collecting material for a travel book. I have often thought the amazing emptiness of this region would attract the interest of many landscape painters and yet, throughout history, only a small number have actually been there.

In 2003, one of them, the 67-year-old painter Philip Hughes, opened a one-man show in London called simply 'Antarctica'. Until 1975, Hughes's paintings were mostly of the South Downs in England, but at this point, Hughes decided he wanted to paint more distant lands. First, he travelled to South America. Then in 2001, he spent five weeks in Antarctica, dividing his time between Rothera, a British research centre on Adelaide Island, and a science camp up on the West Antarctic ice sheet.

Antarctica simply isn't like anywhere else on this planet and for me this was the best thing about my visit. It is one-and-a-half times bigger than the United States but it is very peaceful. It also never gets dark. When I went to Hughes's show, we looked at his paintings together. He explained, 'I was just amazed by the beauty of Antarctica. It didn't matter that our nearest neighbours were 800 kilometres away.' The temperatures can be extreme. At my camp they reached -115°C and at times I felt terrible. But back in England, looking at Hughes's painting 'Leonie Island at Midnight', I remembered what Antarctica was like when a storm ended. It was as if the world was new. Then I wondered why I came back. Hughes was there in summer, and the temperatures were around zero. He could draw in these conditions but if it got colder, he needed to wear gloves. The picture 'Christmas Day at Rothera' was drawn on paper while Hughes sat on the ice. He didn't put paint on it until later when he went inside, a common technique with Hughes. Although there are colours in Antarctica, most of the continent is white. 'The technical difficulty involved in painting there,' explained Hughes, 'was working in white. When I used even a little blue and green, I had to work very carefully.' I asked Hughes why he went to Antarctica. 'Today, people are controlled by things like mobile phones and email. I had to get away from this. You only become aware of the absence, say, of planes overhead, when there aren't any. When it's only you and the natural world, you completely understand its power.'

Task 2 Five people (11-15) all want to buy a book for children. There are descriptions of eight books below (A-H). Decide which book would be the most suitable for these people to buy. You won't need some of the books. For questions 11-15, write the correct letter (A-H) on your answer sheet.

BOOKS FOR CHILDREN by Hannah Lane

A I Wonder Why

The wonders of science come alive for children in this delightful book. As well as enjoying the lovely pictures, they will also learn about how plants grow, see how different birds care for their young and discover some interesting information about insects.

B Basic Technology

A love of knowledge begins early with this colourful reference book. Find out interesting facts and learn about important inventions in the last century. If you know a child who asks questions like 'What make a car go?', then this is the book for you.

C Painting History

This is a beautiful book showing famous paintings through history. Each painting is described in detail, including simple facts about the people shown in them and their lives. Children are invited to look more closely at the pictures and to try some of techniques themselves.

D The Hunter

In this exciting story, wonderfully illustrated by a famous wildlife artist, Jamina finds a baby elephant whose mother was killed by hunters. Looking for help, she travels back through the African bush and is able to enjoy the nature all around her. Her journey teaches her the importance of doing all we can to save and protect our world.

E Forest tales

This book is a collection of seven well-known animal stories from different cultures around the world. They are particularly suitable for reading aloud and would make good bedtime stories. Each story is about six pages long with bright and colourful pictures on every page.

F Journey to the Past

Lying ill in bed, Lucien knows he is not like other boys. In this imaginative story he finds out just how different he is. He discovers that he has the power to transport his mind through space and time. This amazing novel will appeal to those who read to escape from the real world.

G Time Travellers

This very interesting set of stories shows what life was really like for people at certain points in history – the building of the Eiffel Tower, the sinking of the Titanic, the first moon landing. Written as diaries, these stories are historically accurate.

H Joanna's Search

Joanna was brought up by her aunt and uncle and has never known her parents. At 14, she decides to try and find the answers to the questions that she has always asked herself – ‘Who am I?’, ‘Where do I come from?’ The novel tells the moving yet funny story of Joanna’s search for her identity.

11. Gina wants a book for her nephew who is interested in nature. He’s always asking questions about the world around him and Gina thinks he’s ready to start learning a few simple facts.

12. Bruno is looking for the book his daughter will enjoy reading and which will also help with a project she is doing at school. She has to describe an important event from the past.

13. Edita’s son loves animals and she would like to buy him a book with beautiful pictures and a strong message about the need to respect the environment.

14. Tony wants to buy a novel for his teenage sister. She likes stories that are true to life and that show people in difficult situations.

15. Lydia is looking for a book about animals for her granddaughter, who cannot read yet. She wants a book with several stories in it, and some attractive pictures.

ANTARCTICA by Hannah Lane

Journalist Sara Wheeler writes about her meeting with the artist Philip Hughes and the discussion they had about their experiences in Antarctica.

Antarctica has had a powerful effect on both explorers and scientists. In 1994 I discovered why, when I spent seven months there collecting material for a travel book. I have often thought the amazing emptiness of this region would attract the interest of many landscape painters and yet, throughout history, only a small number have actually been there.

In 2003, one of them, the 67-year-old painter Philip Hughes, opened a one-man show in London called simply 'Antarctica'. Until 1975, Hughes's paintings were mostly of the South Downs in England, but at this point, Hughes decided he wanted to paint more distant lands. First, he travelled to South America. Then in 2001, he spent five weeks in Antarctica, dividing his time between Rothera, a British research centre on Adelaide Island, and a science camp up on the West Antarctic ice sheet.

Antarctica simply isn't like anywhere else on this planet and for me this was the best thing about my visit. It is one-and-a-half times bigger than the United States but it is very peaceful. It also never gets dark. When I went to Hughes's show, we looked at his paintings together. He explained, 'I was just amazed by the beauty of Antarctica. It didn't matter that our nearest neighbours were 800 kilometres away.' The temperatures can be extreme. At my camp they reached -115°C and at times I felt terrible. But back in England, looking at Hughes's painting 'Leonie Island at Midnight', I remembered what Antarctica was like when a storm ended. It was as if the world was new. Then I wondered why I came back. Hughes was there in summer, and the temperatures were around zero. He could draw in these conditions but if it got colder, he needed to wear gloves. The picture 'Christmas Day at Rothera' was drawn on paper while Hughes sat on the ice. He didn't put paint on it until later when he went inside, a common technique with Hughes. Although there are colours in Antarctica, most of the continent is white. 'The technical difficulty involved in painting there,' explained Hughes, 'was working in white. When I used even a little blue and green, I had to work very carefully.' I asked Hughes why he went to Antarctica. 'Today, people are controlled by things like mobile phones and email. I had to get away from this. You only become aware of the absence, say, of planes overhead, when there aren't any. When it's only you and the natural world, you completely understand its power.'

James Waltham - Chocolate Taste

Whenever I tell people what I do for a living, they can hardly believe this job exists. But I'm not joking! I spend my days at work eating chocolate! Tasting the chocolate is an essential part of making sure that customers get perfect bars of high-quality chocolate from the company I work for.

Every week I receive samples, small amounts that show what the chocolate is like, from our factory and I have to check them for taste, texture and smell. I also have to taste the raw materials we usually use - the nuts, fruit and so on. I spend days choosing the most suitable ones to go into the chocolate.

Just beside my company office I have a kitchen where I can test and taste products I make -and I keep my colleagues happy by giving them samples! My kitchen is full of machines and ingredients to play with. It's wonderful to have a private space I can go off to during the day.

No two days are the same in this job. Sometimes I am at our food lab and others I'm out of the country buying our raw materials and as I've got a young family that can be difficult. But that kind of variety, and lack of routine, is something I love about the job, although I think it still comes second to the chocolate itself] The question I get asked most is whether I get bored of chocolate. I've worked with it for a long time, and I've never felt I didn't want to eat it. In fact, I'll often go home and eat some more in the evening!

1. What is James Waltham doing in the text?

- A recommending the best ways to test chocolate
- B describing what personal qualities are needed to do his job
- C telling readers what makes his job worth doing for him

D suggesting different methods of making chocolate

2. James says that when he tells people about his work, they

A say they would like to do the same thing.

B doubt whether he is serious.

C think it must be very easy.

D wonder why he chose it as a career.

3. What does James think is a disadvantage of his job?

A He sometimes feels he has eaten too much chocolate.

B He finds it difficult to have a routine with his work.

C He has worked with the same product too long.

D He needs to travel abroad some of the time.

4. Which one would be an advert for the chocolate company James works for?

A/ Every single bar of chocolate that leaves our factory is tested for its taste.

B/ We choose only the best ingredients -just chocolate beans, sugar and milk. We don't add anything else.

C/We're proud of being so environmentally friendly - all our ingredients are bought from local businesses

D/We check everything that goes into our chocolate, so that you can enjoy the best chocolate possible.

SOLO TRAVEL IN AUSTRALIA

A Phil Morston

I remember sitting in the plane thinking to myself: 'What have I let myself in for?' The first few days were scary: I was all on my own on the other side of the world with nothing planned. But I soon met up with people to travel with. Of course, some you get on with, others you don't. Some, for example, had every day planned out in minute detail, when in practice things can change and it's great to have the freedom to go with the flow. And that's easy enough to do. You can take the Oz Experience bus down the west coast, jumping off whenever you want, then catching the next bus when you're ready to move on again. Being away for a year, you do occasionally get lonely. To cheer myself up, I'd sit down and write a fortnightly email home about everything I'd been up to.

B Leila Stuart

Without doubt, you meet all sorts of people when travelling alone. I even made a friend on the plane out there. Some people are keener to make friends than others, of course, but if someone's chosen to do the same type of trip as you, you've probably got lots of ideas in common. The advantages of a pre-planned tour are that you can get an agency to take care of all the arrangements, which can be time-consuming to do yourself- but it does mean that you're tied to a predetermined itinerary, which wouldn't suit everyone. There's also the safety aspect in terms of the places you visit often being very remote. If you go off trekking in the wilds of a foreign country alone, it could be difficult to get help if things went wrong.

C Danny Holt

Travelling solo creates opportunities to meet people. There's no substitute for sharing the experiences of the day with a companion, and being alone forces you to seek someone out. I'd never have met so many people if I'd been travelling with friends. There's also the wonderful freedom to do what you like, when you like, without having to convince anybody that it's a good idea. However, there are downsides, meal times are something I've never really got to grips with in all the years I've travelled alone. But my advice would be to give solo travel a go it can be very liberating. Maybe try a short trip to begin with, just in case it's not for you. Another thing is stay in the nicest places your budget permits. Miserable hostels can really spoil a trip. And if you really are happy 'being anti-social', a pair of headphones can ensure the person in the next seat doesn't bore you to death on the plane!

D Kerry Winterton

Fun as it is, travelling solo also has its low points, including occasional loneliness and the pressure that you're under to make your own mind up about everything. I chose to travel alone because I wanted to do something different, but I did miss people from home, and sometimes fell out with other travellers I'd teamed up with along the way. But I learnt to accept that some people have different attitudes to mine; that you have to put up with irritating people in hostels and accept not having as much privacy as you're used to at home. The best thing for me about travelling alone was that it was a brilliant experience that enhanced my independence and helped me feel more self-assured. I knew I was on my own, which made me make more effort to speak to people and by doing so I made lots of great friends.

Part 1

For questions 1-8, read the text below. Use the word given in capitals at the end of some of the lines to form a word that fits in the gap in the same line. There is an example at the beginning (0).

Brain games

According to experts, doing puzzles keeps our brains fit and (0 - HEALTH)...healthy... As well as gaining (1 - SATISFY) satisfaction + from finding the correct answer to a difficult problem, we give our brains a good workout in the process. To help us do this, all sorts of handheld 'brain games' are now available in the shops, and the most (2 - SUCCESS) successful + games have sold in their millions.

What's more, people (3 - COVER) discovered + that the more they play the games, the easier it is to find a (4 - SOLVE) solution + to the problems posed. They see this as proof that there has been an (5 - IMPROVE) improvement + in the power of their brains. Unfortunately, however, this may be a false impression.

Some (6 - SCIENCE) scientists + argue that the brain gets better at any task the more often it is repeated. In other words, the improvement in the (7 - PERFORM) performance + of the brain is something that happens naturally. So although these brain games are obviously fun to play, it remains (8 - CERTAIN) uncertain + whether they are actually helping to boost brain power or not.

Part 2

For questions 9-16, read the text below and think of the word which best fits each gap. Use only one word in each gap.

Swimming with seals

The UK is home to half the world's population of grey seals and there (0) ...are... many local boat trips offering sightseeing tours out to the islands and sandbanks (9) where + the animals are most regularly found.

But if you really want to get close (10) to + the seals and understand something about their way of life, then you need to go on an underwater seal-watching trip. On these trips, you have the chance to go over the side of the boat and, equipped (11) with + a wetsuit, mask and snorkel, spend time in the water alongside the animals.

Seals are extremely inquisitive creatures and, once you're in the water, they will swim past you trying to work (12) out ⁺who you are and (13) what ⁺ you're doing there. (14) Though ⁺ they can appear shy at first, seals soon (15) get ⁺used to you being in the water, and will come and play around you. Young pups especially like to (16) have ⁺ contact with divers, and often use their teeth, gently biting masks, fins and cameras out of curiosity. It can be a thrilling experience.

Some (6 - SCIENCE)...scientists... argue that the brain gets better at any task the more often it is repeated. In other words, the improvement in the (7 - PERFORM)...performance... of the brain is something that happens naturally. So although these brain games are obviously fun to play, it remains (8 - CERTAIN)...uncertainty... whether they are actually helping to boost brain power or not.

Part 2

For questions 9-16, read the text below and think of the word which best fits each gap. Use only one word in each gap.

WRITING

You must answer this question. Write your answer in 140-190 words in an appropriate style. In your English class you have been talking about different ways to protect the environment. Now your English teacher has asked you to write an essay. Write an essay using all the notes and give reasons for your point of view.

What can young people do to help protect and improve their local environment?

Notes

Write about:

1. recycling things
2. cycling or walking instead of using cars
3. (your own idea)

WRITING

I think, that young people can make more for environment, because even nowadays a lot of people ^{don't} ~~don't~~ think about it. But I know, there is a small group of people, which thinks about environment and inventing new methods of improving the environment. For example, recycling things. It's very good method for & rescue the environment. But I think, this method have some problems. For example, people a lot of people just ignore this thing and throw his trash on the ground.

I know a ^{second} method of protect environment. It is cycling or walking instead of using car. I think, it is very good way to protecting our environment. Because car requires a fuel or something like that. It's very harmful for environment. And walking improve your health and saving environment from pollution.

James Waltham - Chocolate Taste

Whenever I tell people what I do for a living, they can hardly believe this job exists. But I'm not joking! I spend my days at work eating chocolate! Tasting the chocolate is an essential part of making sure that customers get perfect bars of high-quality chocolate from the company I work for.

Every week I receive samples, small amounts that show what the chocolate is like, from our factory and I have to check them for taste, texture and smell. I also have to taste the raw materials we usually use - the nuts, fruit and so on. I spend days choosing the most suitable ones to go into the chocolate.

Just beside my company office I have a kitchen where I can test and taste products I make -and I keep my colleagues happy by giving them samples! My kitchen is full of machines and ingredients to play with. It's wonderful to have a private space I can go off to during the day.

No two days are the same in this job. Sometimes I am at our food lab and others I'm out of the country buying our raw materials and as I've got a young family that can be difficult. But that kind of variety, and lack of routine, is something I love about the job, although I think it still comes second to the chocolate itself] The question I get asked most is whether I get bored of chocolate. I've worked with it for a long time, and I've never felt I didn't want to eat it. In fact, I'll often go home and eat some more in the evening!

1. What is James Waltham doing in the text?

- ☒ A recommending the best ways to test chocolate
- ☐ B describing what personal qualities are needed to do his job
- ☐ C telling readers what makes his job worth doing for him

D suggesting different methods of making chocolate

2. James says that when he tells people about his work, they

A say they would like to do the same thing.

+ ☒ B doubt whether he is serious.

C think it must be very easy.

D wonder why he chose it as a career.

3. What does James think is a disadvantage of his job?

A He sometimes feels he has eaten too much chocolate.

B He finds it difficult to have a routine with his work.

— ☒ C He has worked with the same product too long.

D He needs to travel abroad some of the time.

4. Which one would be an advert for the chocolate company James works for?

A/ Every single bar of chocolate that leaves our factory is tested for its taste.

+ B/ We choose only the best ingredients -just chocolate beans, sugar and milk. We don't add anything else.

C/We're proud of being so environmentally friendly - all our ingredients are bought from local businesses

☒ D/We check everything that goes into our chocolate, so that you can enjoy the best chocolate possible.

Part 2

You are going to read a magazine article about students who travelled around Australia alone during their long summer vacation. For questions 5-14, choose from the students (A-D). The students may be chosen more than once.

Which student mentions ...

5/ a daily activity that was not enjoyable alone?

6/ a good way of keeping travel plans flexible?

7/ appreciating not having to waste time organising practical details?

8/ becoming more tolerant of other people?

9/ feeling better after keeping in touch with others?

10/ having doubts at the beginning of a trip?

11/ liking not having to agree an itinerary with others?

12/ meeting people with a similar outlook on life?

13/ missing having someone to help with decision-making?

14/ the advisability of going for the best accommodation you can afford?

3800000

A Phil Morston 10 11

I remember sitting in the plane thinking to myself: 'What have I let myself in for?' The first few days were scary: I was all on my own on the other side of the world with nothing planned. But I soon met up with people to travel with. Of course, some you get on with, others you don't. Some, for example, had every day planned out day in minute detail, when in practice things can change and it's great to have the freedom to go with the flow. And that's easy enough to do. You can take the Oz Experience bus down the west coast, jumping off whenever you want, then catching the next bus when you're ready to move on again. Being away for a year, you do occasionally get lonely. To cheer myself up, I'd sit down and write a fortnightly email home about everything I'd been up to.

B Leila Stuart 7, 12 — —

Without doubt, you meet all sorts of people when travelling alone. I even made a friend on the plane out there. Some people are keener to make friends than others, of course, but if someone's chosen to do the same type of trip as you, you've probably got lots of ideas in common. The advantages of a pre-planned tour are that you can get an agency to take care of all the arrangements, which can be time-consuming to do yourself- but it does mean that you're tied to a predetermined itinerary, which wouldn't suit everyone. There's also the safety aspect in terms of the places you visit often being very remote. If you go off trekking in the wilds of a foreign country alone, it could be difficult to get help if things went wrong.

C Danny Holt 9, 14 — —

Travelling solo creates opportunities to meet people. There's no substitute for sharing the experiences of the day with a companion, and being alone forces you to seek someone out. I'd never have met so many people if I'd been travelling with friends. There's also the wonderful freedom to do what you like, when you like, without having to convince anybody that it's a good idea. However, there are downsides, meal times are something I've never really got to grips with in all the years I've travelled alone. But my advice would be to give solo travel a go it can be very liberating. Maybe try a short trip to begin with, just in case it's not for you. Another thing is stay in the nicest places your budget permits. Miserable hostels can really spoil a trip. And if you really are happy 'being anti-social', a pair of headphones can ensure the person in the next seat doesn't bore you to death on the plane!

D Kerry Winterton 8 12 9 — — +

Fun as it is, travelling solo also has its low points, including occasional loneliness and the pressure that you're under to make your own mind up about everything. I chose to travel alone because I wanted to do something different, but I did miss people from home, and sometimes fell out with other travellers I'd teamed up with along the way. But I learnt to accept that some people have different attitudes to mine; that you have to put up with irritating people in hostels and accept not having as much privacy as you're used to at home. The best thing for me about travelling alone was that it was a brilliant experience that enhanced my independence and helped me feel more self-assured. I knew I was on my own, which made me make more effort to speak to people and by doing so I made lots of great friends.

28/11/11

For questions 1-8, read the text below. Use the word given in capitals at the end of some of the lines to form a word that fits in the gap in the same line. There is an example at the beginning (0).

In the exam, write your answers IN CAPITAL LETTERS on the separate answer sheet.

Brain games

According to experts, doing puzzles keeps our brains fit and (0 - HEALTH)...healthy... As well as gaining (1 - SATISFY)...satisfying... from finding the correct answer to a difficult problem, we give our brains a good workout in the process. To help us do this, all sorts of handheld 'brain games' are now available in the shops, and the most (2 - SUCCESS)...successful... games have sold in their millions.

What's more, people (3 - COVER)...discovered... that the more they play the games, the easier it is to find a (4 - SOLVE)...solving... to the problems posed. They see this as proof that there has been an (5 - IMPROVE)...improvement... in the power of their brains. Unfortunately, however, this may be a false impression.

Some (6 - SCIENCE)...scientists... argue that the brain gets better at any task the more often it is repeated. In other words, the improvement in the (7 - PERFORM)...performance... of the brain is something that happens naturally.
